Tips to Help Protect Your Nonpublic Personal Information

- Before revealing nonpublic personal information to third parties, find out how it will be used and if others will share it.
- Keep documents with nonpublic personal information in a secure place. Either tear or shred them when disposing. Dispose of check copies, statements, charge receipts, insurance forms, expired check cards and credit offers the same way.
- You can also help maintain the security of your nonpublic personal information by not sharing your user ID, PIN or password with anyone, by changing your password regularly and by remembering to sign off if using a personal computer.
- Remove your name from direct mailing and e-mail lists by registering at the Direct Marketing Association's Consumer Information site at www.dmchoice.org.
- You can also stop telemarketing calls by registering online at the Federal Trade Commission's "Do Not Call Registry" at www.donotcall.gov or calling toll-free (888) 382-1222 from the telephone number you wish to register. Registration is free.
